topic:

DHL/FedEx/UPS

What's happening outside the box?

The continued growth of business to consumer e-commerce has increased demand for low-cost package shipping services. Several companies have emerged and merged over the last few years, and they all play an important part in the ever-widening supply chain. What about the Big Three? What are they doing about it?

The Nebraska Logistics Council is pleased to have three of the heavy-hitters speak to our group at the October meeting. They'll each speak of developments in the small package industry, give updates on the individual company's positioning with global market share, new services offered and much more.

Edmund Tunney is the regional director of sales of DHL Express covering Nebraska, Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin, North & South Dakota. Tunney has been in transportation for several years, some of those being spent abroad in Europe.

Brad Palmer is a strategic market manager in the Omaha & Des Moines areas for FedEx. He's had 15 years experience with the company.

Jeff Fite, director of sales for the Prairie Mountain District for UPS, has a 22 year career with the company. He's held several other positions in the company, most recently he was the director of sales training at UPS's corporate headquarters in Atlanta.

Reservations not cancelled by noon the day prior to the event will be billed.
You also have the option to send someone in your place if you're unable to attend.
